Oldbury & Cruickshank have a proud tradition of catering for children of all ages when it comes to eye care.

Looking after your child's health is an important element of being a parent, yet when it comes to your child's eye health many families are seemingly in the dark.

Here are some eye-opening points about children's eyecare that we want all parents to know:

- Children need more frequent eye tests as their vision develops quicker as they grow. Every six months is recommended.
- Children's eyesight is fully developed at age eight, but can be examined at a much younger age - well before they can read.
- Only 10% of parents know if their child's school offers a vision screening programme.
- Eye tests for children are completely free at Oldbury & Cruickshank.
- Students in further education may qualify for financial help for eye tests and to buy glasses or contact lenses.
- Children spend more time outside, and like skin, their eyes need protection from UV rays with the use of sunglasses.

Children with dyslexia can also be helped through precision tinted spectacles and Jean Oldbury, owner of Oldbury & Cruickshank, has detailed knowledge in this area and will be happy to advise parents. "Children require premium and no glare lenses, to help with important daily tasks" adds Nigel.

We offer lightweight and durable lenses, which are also water resistant and won't scratch as easily."

Sunglasses are available for children along with sports eyewear with wrap frames and prescription inserts. Using the latest technology, Transitions lenses give maximum benefit for all lighting conditions.

O&C is committed to children's eye health and we are proud supporters of the 'Eye Know Eyecare' campaign by Transitions.
